

ABSTRACT

Detecting an object, where a light source and an optical receiver are used, and the object is detected by having it intersect the ray of light between the light source and the optical receiver. The optical receiver includes, at least, a fluorescing device.

5